Will Build Commission Houses and Cold Storage Plant on a New Street in Salt Lake.

The Salt Lake Tribune says: One of the most important propositions in the history of the city, affecting not only real estate values, but fraught with great significance to produce and commission men, is a recent deal whereby Matthew S. Browning and David Eccles, both of Ogdens, two of the wealthiest men in Utah, will immediately construct eighteen big store-rooms for commission houses on a new street, which they will cut through and open from Second to Third West, running through the block bounded by Second and Third South streets and by Second and Third West streets.

This deal will change the whole map of the market district, and it means that Salt Lake City is to have a regular commission house row.

Each of the eighteen new commission houses will be two stories high, with a deep storage basement, and will be constructed of concrete and be absolutely fireproof throughout. Each concern will have an individual freight elevator.

It is a movement of magnitude, and when all of the plans of Browning and Eccles are carried out Salt Lake City will possess a new warehouse section which will compare favorably in size, convenience and concentration with the wholesale district of any other city in the country.

Messrs. Browning and Eccles have secured a strip, 165 feet wide and 660 feet long, running entirely through the block from Second to Third West. The Oregon Short Line track is already laid in the rear, so that the warehouse district which is being accommodated, but a double track will be run on one side of the street to be opened through the block, leaving sixty-five feet of street to allow the passage of drays and truck wagons. The cars will be run right up over these tracks, so that the commission houses may load and unload produce with ease and dispatch.

It is said that Mr. Eccles also has plans under way for the building of the biggest cold storage plant in the west, to be erected on the corner of the new market street and Second West street. This plant involves the expenditure of several hundred thousand dollars.

When all of the details of this gigantic cold storage plant and commission house scheme are carried out, Salt Lake City will boast a market system second to none in the country.

INJURED BY PASSENGER TRAIN

SIGNAL SERVICE INSPECTOR IS HURLED FROM THE TRACK.

Riding a Gasoline Speeder When Over-taken by a Fast Train—He Is Conveyed to Hospital.

O. A. Byrne of the signal service department of the Southern Pacific railroad was seriously injured near Promontory Point late Monday afternoon. Byrne was using his gasoline speeder to inspect the signal apparatus on the main line when he looked over his shoulder and discovered east-bound passenger train No. 4 bearing down on him at a high rate of speed. He endeavored to get his gasoline machine on an adjacent sidetrack and in the clear, but the passenger engine struck the trailer wheel and hurled the speeder and the signal operator in the air and some distance away. The train was stopped as quickly as possible and Mr. Byrne was picked up in a helpless condition and brought to the general hospital for treatment.

His face, shoulders, sides and breast evidenced painful injuries and it is feared he suffered internally from the collision.

He is resting as easy as possible under the circumstances today and his friends are congratulating him over his escape from death or serious mutilation.
